CEcD Emeritus Application International Economic Development Council

The Certified Economic Developer (CEcD) Emeritus status was established by IEDC to provide lifetime recognition to Certified Economic Developers who have entered retirement, but do not want to lose their ties to IEDC or the profession. The CEcD Emeritus status authorizes the individual to continue using the CEcD designation without having to submit further recertification information. This program gives back to those practitioners who have made a significant contribution to the field. The CEcD Emeritus status is only applicable to retired economic developers who had the CEcD designation at the time of retirement. Retirement refers to legal retirement; the CEcD Emeritus status is not applicable to practitioners who are entering a phase between positions, changing professions or entering into consultancy.

To qualify for the Emeritus status, a CEcD must be retired and have either 20 years of experience in economic development, or have been certified for 10 or more years. CEcDs who are Honorary Lifetime Members (HLM) are not required to pay the Emeritus fee. All individuals must complete the CEcD Emeritus Status application form and submit a resume.
